HAYDEN

The peace and quiet of Winkelman has been considerably perturbed of late through dissensions between certain factions apparently existing there which culminated in a misdemeanor charge against Officer Jasper Henderson, the complaint being filed by Paul Carrigan who presides over the bar in the Pullman saloon. This case would ordinarily have been handled by Justice Roberts of the Winkelman precinct but through a change of venue the matter was brought before Justice Rice at this point. It developed that some effort had been made to remove Officer Henderson from the office by process of a recall petition and it was on this score that he appeared at the Pullman saloon one day last week and gave Carrigan somewhat of a "cussing out." The small son of the officer was present at this performance and formed a strong link in the case against him on the charge of "using vile and obscene language on a public thoroughfare and in the presence of a minor." Much of the testimony was quite interesting to those familiar with conditions leading up to the affair and was of such a convincing character that the jury empaneled to handle the case came forth with a verdict declaring Mr. Henderson guilty as charged.

Will Nash, brother of Deputy Walter Nash, is a recent arrival in Hayden and is contemplating making his residence here.

Wallace W. Duncan, of Globe, is in Hayden for a few days. Mr. Duncan is one of Gila county's deputy tax collectors.

Frank Baker, who has charge of the operation of the pumping plant and the sub-station at Kelvin is in Hayden having a little dental work done by Dr. Root. Mrs. Baker accompanied him and they made the trip on horseback.

Mrs. J. A. Grace has just returned from a vacation of several months in Los Angeles and vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. John MacIntyre returned the early part of the week from San Francisco where they have been enjoying a vacation for several weeks.

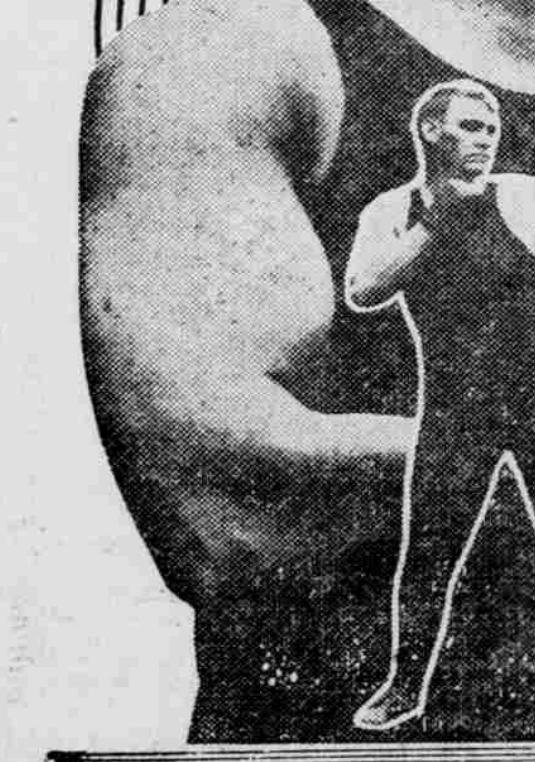

Gus Hirschfeld has returned from Phoenix where he has been for several days.

Edmund Kasold returned Sunday from Santa Monica, Cal., where he has just enjoyed a two weeks' vacation visiting his mother.

The second annual picnic of the Sunday school here took place Wednesday under the direction of superintendent Joe H. Browne, who was ably assisted in this work by the several Sunday school teachers and members of the church congregation.

They left the schoolhouse in the early morning in the two large busses of the Wilcox Transfer Co. and drove to a place along the San Pedro river several miles from Hayden where a most enjoyable day was spent in the groves and fields for which that section is famous. There was a large gathering of young people, most of the children of the town availing themselves of the opportunity for an enjoyable outing.

CARL MORRIS STILL THINKS HE'S THE MOST DANGEROUS WHITE HOPE LIVING

Carl Morris, Oklahoma's giant boxer, still retains the impression that he's the most dangerous white hope that is running around loose. He believes that with good management and better handling than he has ever had before he will easily prove his supremacy over Gunboat Smith, Arthur Polky and Jess Willard.

STRAY TOPICS FROM LITTLE OLD NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—The years of determined effort on the part of the health authorities, several charitable organizations and a number of local philanthropists, to improve the hygienic conditions surrounding infant life in this city are beginning to bear fruit. During the last few years the mortality among infants in Greater New York has shown a fairly steady decline, even during the most unfavorable weather conditions of the summer and the improvement seems to continue. According to the report just published by the health department, New York was the only large city in the country to show a decrease in the average death rate for infants in the first six months of 1913.

For many years, longer, in fact, than any resident of the city can remember, certain of the poor sections of New York have been infested and made unsafe by the presence of organized gangs of men, unscrupulous, brutal, cowardly and steeped into every vice, capable of any crime. In the hands of Tammany these gangs were valuable tools and weapons against their political opponents and, in consideration for their services at primaries and elections the members of these gangs enjoyed practical immunity from police interference and other privileges.

The brutal killing of Rosenthal by members of one of the lower East Side gangs and a number of other murders committed since then, brought matters to a climax and the decent and law abiding citizens made a powerful demand for the suppression and extermination of these gangs. Notwithstanding the disgraceful exposures of police corruption which resulted from the Rosenthal murder investigation, the police were either powerless or unwilling to make determined war against the gangsters and the citizens finally reached the conclusion that, if they wished the gangs driven out, they would have to do the driving out themselves. The other day the citizens of the lower East Side held a mass meeting in which the situation was thoroughly discussed and the decision reached to make a determined effort to rid the East Side of the numerous gangs which infest it. The citizens decided to make a joint effort with a view of making things unpleasant for the gangsters and reached the unanimous decision not to depend upon the assistance of the police authorities in their efforts.

The keeper of the city morgue was greatly puzzled the other day when a young Italian with an extremely fragmentary knowledge of the English language, came to him and said something which sounded to the keeper like an inquiry concerning some dead person. The keeper made a desperate effort to draw some intelligible information concerning the supposed corpse from the young Italian, but in answer to the question who the dead person was, the young man invariably repeated something that sounded like "letta". At least the keeper called in another Italian as interpreter and soon the mystery was explained.

The young Italian had been expecting a letter from his folk in Italy for some time and when he spoke of it to some friends they told him that the letter had probably gone to the "dead letter office." The young Italian man did not know where that office was and made inquiries concerning its location. The men he asked, not being familiar with his style of speaking English, did not quite understand him and, believing that he wanted some person who was dead, sent him to the morgue.

Four leading suffragettes, Herriet Porritt, Laura Crozier, Mrs. Marie Fenn and Mrs. Nora Blatch of Forest, are making a campaign tour in favor of the cause, traversing New Jersey on horseback. Four suffragettes on horseback, preaching equal suffrage from the saddle, is in itself quite an attraction, but when it became known that the four mounted female apostles of woman's suffrage had named their steeds Senator Root, Senator Fawley, Dr. Lyman Abbott and Rev. Dr. Charles Parkhurst, the New Jerseyans gathered in great throngs wherever the four equestriennes appeared. When the ladies gravely introduced their steeds to the crowd, a tittering and giggling ran through the crowd and occasionally some embarrassing remark was made by someone in the crowd. It appealed to the sense of humor of the people that the four suffragettes had selected the name of four distinguished men for their steeds, although three of them are mares.

As the result of a serious blunder on his part, James B. Zaring, a traveling salesman of Brooklyn and four private detectives whom he had employed in an effort to obtain damaging evidence against his wife, whom he wishes to divorce, were sentenced each to one month in jail. Zaring had for some time suspected his wife and had her shadowed to a certain apartment house by private detectives. One night last week, after the sleuths had reported that Mrs. Zaring was visiting someone in one of the flats of the apartment house in question, Mr. Zaring, accompanied by four private detectives, made his way to the apartment house and stealthily climbed up the fire escape to reach the flat where his unfaithful wife was supposed to be.

Through some unpardonable blunder Zaring and his helpers entered the wrong flat and when the occupants, an artist and his wife, awakened from the noise made by the intruders, climbing through the window, defended themselves against the supposed burglars, a terrible fight in the dark ensued. Furniture was upset, lamps and vases were broken and so much noise was made, that the occupants of the adjoining flat, who happened to have a woman visitor, blew a police whistle and then made his escape down the fire escape.

while his visitor fled down the stairs. Zaring was miserable enough when he learned that he had invaded the wrong flat and when the magistrate sentenced him and his helpers to a month in jail, but when he was informed that it was the occupant of the flat which he had intended to invade who had blown the police whistle and had then made his escape, he was even more dejected.

An engineering feat never surpassed in railroad engineering in this country was performed recently when the great railroad trestle bridge, more than a mile long, which spans Newark Bay between Newark and Greenville, N. J., and which was burned in the night of June 14; was rebuilt in twelve days. The bridge was 5,653 feet long, with a draw of 264 feet and formed the chief connecting link of the Pennsylvania and the Lehigh freight system between the west and New England, through New York City. Fifteen hundred men worked night and day to complete the work.

WITH THE BOXERS

Jim Jeffries has offered to train Ad Volgas and put the former champion lightweight back in the running.

Jimmy Dime, the Pittsburg promoter, is manager of more boxers than is any other man in the country.

Manager Tommy Burns is anxious to match Arthur Pelkey against Jack Johnson, the bout to take place in Paris.

Gunboat Smith says he is willing to meet Sam Langford if he is given the big end of the purse. Sam declares he is not in the fighting business for the love of the game.
